

Academics and Research

Want to know more about a complex social challenge and learn skills to advance research toward a solution? Take advantage of Marlboro's distinct academic program that it encourages creative real world applications of theory and research, innovation does not end in the classroom or in the pages of a Plan.

Sample Courses

Inequality and U.S. Social Policy (SSC666)

Community and governance colloquium (CDS619)

Civil Rights and Criminal Wrongs (SSC686)

Global Literary Responses to Environmental Crisis:A Multi-Genre Writing Workshop (HUM2486)

Writing Seminar: Life/Work: Examining Labor in America (HUM2487)

Experiential Learning options

Certificate in Nonprofit Management

College for Social Innovation

Expedition Education Institute

REU

Grant/Funding opportunities

Marlboro College Grants and Scholarships

Big Ideas

Open Society Fellowship

Community Profile

Solomon Botwick-Ries '17

"At Marlboro, we study in entanglement with the past, critically engaging the legacies that have brought about such immense suffering: systems of oppression, cultural forms and social structures that cause harm, cause hunger. Our work is a critical inheritance of these technologies of self and society, these ways that we have waged war on each other, waged war on the Earth. Indeed, we are studying at the edge of time. So I believe it is a tremendous summons, an urgent opportunity for our responsibility: to study at Marlboro in a time where Black Lives Matter, to study at Marlboro at a time where Women's Rights are Human Rights, to study at Marlboro at a time where Immigrants Make America Great, to study at Marlboro in a time where Climate Change is Real." - excerpt from 2017 commencement address

Plan of Concentration

The Whole Zucchini: an engaged-Buddhist eco-theology of foodways

\(link to the virtual plan room\)